

TECH STARTUP FUNDING

The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) regulates laws that govern how founders raise startup capital, who they can raise from, how, and how much. Securities law segregates investors into two classes: "accredited" and "non-accredited."

For individuals ("natural persons"), the SEC defines accreditation by income and net worth. Investors who don't meet SEC thresholds are restricted - sometimes barred - from investing in startup offerings.

Founders without high net worth networks face separate and unequal offering regulations that make it hard for most founders to raise capital. Due to the wealth and wage gaps, it is especially hard for underrepresented founders. This is a result of economic engineering and startup redlining, a form of systemic racism.

The Jumpstart Our Business Startups (JOBS) Act introduced general solicitation under Reg D 506(c) & Reg CF (crowdfunding) "offerings," to allow founders to raise capital outside of their personal networks, but it did not end discriminatory outcomes.
